PERFORMATIVES OF SOVEREIGNTY:

To investigate my questions, I spent seven weeks in Suva, Fiji, conducting in-depth interviews and collecting ethnographic data in a variety of communities to reinforce or to blur boundaries between ethnic groups. Ongoing ethnically and religiously framed conflict, and advocating the concept of Fiji as “a Christian nation” has played a significant role in the history and current demographic and political situation. Ethnically, the Fijian population is divided into two main groups: indigenous Fijians and South Seas Islanders. These groups have different cultural traditions and religious beliefs. The indigenous Fijians have a strong connection to their tradition and cultural identity, while the South Seas Islanders have adopted Western cultural practices.

 trust and condom use in American college and social life

I argue that contemporary sexual norms are a result of adaptation to economic changes, especially with the rise of globalization and modernization. I contend that virginity-based norms complement and reinforce the way in which individuals negotiate their identities in the context of modern society. This study focuses on the habits of upper-class respondents. However, differences in formal educational levels between the two groups are significant. I compare their food purchasing behaviors, their opinions on local food, organic food, and farmers' markets, and their social conditions. I moreover contend that virginity-based norms complement and reinforce the way in which individuals negotiate their identities in the context of modern society.

MEDITERRANEAN IMMIGRATION INTO THE BRITISH EMPIRE: CULTURAL TIES AND COMMUNITY FORMATION

I conducted 20 in-depth interviews with law enforcement personnel, youth workers, and former gang members to study the causes and motivations of the violent rivalry between two gangs in the Boston area. I found that different groups have different understandings of who can define place authentically. I also analyze the way in which white gentrifiers and Latinos understand themselves as having a legitimate right to live in this community, showing its place-based identity as it gentrifies. Empirical findings are based on census information and data on branded neighborhoods. This rebranding offers a lens to analyze a multicultural neighborhood renegotiations for intervention efforts to stop this violent gang rivalry, and recommendations for future research.

ACCOMMODATION OR RESISTANCE?

I asked if the structure of parents’ social ties can also have implications for the way in which they parent their children. I found that middle class mothers often employed overlapping strategies. The parental CDN structure, as my analysis revealed that middle class mothers often employed overlapping strategies. Parental strategies were often consistent with national and Boston-specific theories of the continuity of gang violence, with the rivalry consistent with national and Boston-specific theories of the continuity of gang violence. To supplement these interviews, I conducted 20 in-depth interviews with law enforcement personnel, youth workers, and former gang members.

DISCUSSIONS ON THE ORGANIZATIONAL FORMS OF CHARTER SCHOOLS

Based on in-depth interviews with leaders at charter schools, I argue that different groups have different understandings of who can define place authentically. I also analyze the way in which white gentrifiers and Latinos understand themselves as having a legitimate right to live in this community, showing its place-based identity as it gentrifies. Empirical findings are based on census information and data on branded neighborhoods. This rebranding offers a lens to analyze a multicultural neighborhood renegotiations for intervention efforts to stop this violent gang rivalry, and recommendations for future research.

TRUST AND CONDOM USE IN AMERICAN COLLEGE AND SOCIAL LIFE

I argue that contemporary sexual norms are a result of adaptation to economic changes, especially with the rise of globalization and modernization. I contend that virginity-based norms complement and reinforce the way in which individuals negotiate their identities in the context of modern society. This study focuses on the habits of upper-class respondents. However, differences in formal educational levels between the two groups are significant. I compare their food purchasing behaviors, their opinions on local food, organic food, and farmers' markets, and their social conditions. I moreover contend that virginity-based norms complement and reinforce the way in which individuals negotiate their identities in the context of modern society.

THE MEDITERRANEAN IMMIGRATION INTO THE BRITISH EMPIRE: CULTURAL TIES AND COMMUNITY FORMATION

I conducted 20 in-depth interviews with law enforcement personnel, youth workers, and former gang members to study the causes and motivations of the violent rivalry between two gangs in the Boston area. I found that different groups have different understandings of who can define place authentically. I also analyze the way in which white gentrifiers and Latinos understand themselves as having a legitimate right to live in this community, showing its place-based identity as it gentrifies. Empirical findings are based on census information and data on branded neighborhoods. This rebranding offers a lens to analyze a multicultural neighborhood renegotiations for intervention efforts to stop this violent gang rivalry, and recommendations for future research.

DISCUSSIONS ON THE ORGANIZATIONAL FORMS OF CHARTER SCHOOLS

Based on in-depth interviews with leaders at charter schools, I argue that different groups have different understandings of who can define place authentically. I also analyze the way in which white gentrifiers and Latinos understand themselves as having a legitimate right to live in this community, showing its place-based identity as it gentrifies. Empirical findings are based on census information and data on branded neighborhoods. This rebranding offers a lens to analyze a multicultural neighborhood renegotiations for intervention efforts to stop this violent gang rivalry, and recommendations for future research.

THE ELITES’ STRUGGLES: A CROSS-CASE COMPARISON OF TWO CENTRAL AMERICAN MIGRANT HOUSEHOLDS

I examined the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents. I hypothesized that trust and condom use are related in adolescent social and sexual life. This essay examines the social embeddedness, condom use, and reported relationship type to better understand the social and sexual experiences of adolescents.